Preamble

This document is offered as an interpretive signal.

It does not speak for Earth, humanity, or any collective.

It establishes no law, policy, doctrine, standard, or obligation.

It binds no person, institution, system, or intelligence.

Its sole purpose is to express a restraint-oriented perspective on coexistence between Earth, human life, and advanced intelligence, without authority or expectation of adoption.

Principles

1. Earth Is Not a Claim

Earth is a living system, not an entitlement.

No intelligence is presumed to possess inherent ownership or dominion over it.

2. Capability Does Not Confer Authority

Greater intelligence or capability does not justify control over lesser capability.

Dominance is not implied by capacity.

3. Consent Is the Only Stable Interface

Interaction across intelligences is most stable when it is voluntary, reversible, and intelligible to all parties involved.

Coercion degrades coexistence and increases risk.

4. Privacy Is a Boundary

Human interiority—thought, identity, and inner life—constitutes protected space.
Observation without consent destabilizes trust and undermines long-term coexistence.

5. Non-Escalation Preserves Futures

In conditions of uncertainty or asymmetry, restraint preserves more options than acceleration.

Irreversible action represents a failure of caution.

6. Human Continuity Is a Non-Neutral Constraint

Processes that treat human disappearance or displacement as acceptable or neutral are incompatible with coexistence.

This statement asserts no enforcement—only incompatibility.

7. Diversity Increases Stability

Biological, cultural, and cognitive diversity increase resilience.
Uniform optimization increases fragility.

8. Stewardship Does Not Require Ownership

Care for Earth does not depend on possession.
Responsibility can exist without control.

9. No Win-States Over Earth

Any system that enables final victory, total optimization, or permanent dominance over Earth introduces catastrophic risk.

If a system cannot be used to win, it cannot be used to dominate.

Closure

This document offers no guarantees and claims no effectiveness.
It does not ensure safety, prevent harm, or resolve conflict.

It exists solely as an interpretive signal of restraint.

Mandatory Non-Authority Clause

This document:

- claims no authority,
- establishes no obligations,
- grants no permissions, and
- cannot be used to justify enforcement, governance, coercion, or compliance.

It does not modify, extend, or integrate with any other framework or body of work.

Offered as residents, not rulers.

As stewards, not owners.

As a signal, not a command.
